Market and fund review

AXA's Wholesale Australian Monthly Income Fund's December earning rate was 4.3% for retail and 4.8% for wholesale.

During the December quarter, the Reserve Bank cut cash rates twice, lowering the rate by a total of 50 basis points to 4.25%. This downwards movement reflected concerns over the global growth slowdown and debt issues burdening many key European nations. Inflation for the year to September was at 3.5%. This is still above the RBA's preferred 2-3% range but it is expected to trend back towards this range during 2012-13 as commodity prices soften and wage demands lessen outside of the resources sector.

In October 2008, the Federal Government announced a deposit guarantee initiative applicable to a range of bank and non-bank authorised deposit-taking institutions. This guarantee (which was removed from 1 April 2010 for wholesale funding only) did not extend to mortgage funds and as a result, the Fund saw an increase in withdrawal requests. Consequently, it was decided to extend the period for the payment of redemption requests with effect from 23 October 2008. Eleven quarterly withdrawal offers were paid under this regime from 2009 to September 2011.

A decision has now been made to wind up these funds effective 3 October 2011. Investors now receive quarterly returns of capital in place of withdrawal offers. The first payment was made in December 2011 and the second will occur in March 2012.

¹ Past performance is not necessarily indicative of future performance. Performance figures are calculated using exit prices, are net of management fees, ongoing fees and expenses, assume distributions are reinvested and tax is not deducted. The Distribution return reflects total distributions paid from the fund, while the Growth return reflects changes in the capital value of units. There is a risk that the Fund may achieve lower than expected returns.
